HARD TASK FACES PRINCETON COACHES

Perfection of Plays Is Necessary to Save Tigers From Defeat by Yale.

EDDIE HART WILL HELP

By NELSON M. ("PJ") WAY. (Famous Yale Pootball Player.) BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 12-A host of coaches will invade the Jungle town this week and do all in their power to fit the Tiger eleven for its annual battle with the Elis. All who attended the Hervard game yesterday realized that it only was by the narrowest margin that the Crimson team was able to conquer Princeton. Outside of a few long runs by Casey Harvard was not able to make much headway argums. able to make much headway against the strong Tiger rush line, which was stronger than Harvard's.

Princeton followers fully appreciate this fact and feel that with a lot of good solid work the Tigers will be able to perfect their play to such an extent that a victory over Vale will not be determined by so parrow a margin as termined by so narrow a margin as 3 points, as was the case in the Harvard contest. Despite the fact that Yale was defeated in its battle with Brown the Princeton followers realize that the game with Eli will be a hard one, and that they must work every whelmed the Columbia football squad minute this week to prepare for the this season, but it has not stilled the minute this week to prepare for the battle.

Eddie Hart, old Tiger captain, arrived from Chicago too late to aid in fitting the team for the Harvard game, but he assured me to-day that he will be on the job this week and that every effort will be advanced on his part to help Princeton best Yale next Saturday. Hart felt very keenly the defeat of the Tigers by Harvard. He told me he believed that Princeton failed because of the loss of Tibbott and the so-called breaks in football, which did not faver the Tiger eleven. He was particularly put out over the fact that Brown and not Moore happened to be about when the ball rolled from Cassey's arms, as Hart felt confident that had Moore been near the ball Princeton would have near the ball Princeton would have Morningside Heights institution if noth-beaten Harvard at least 6 to 3. ing else overhauled by the Crimson end.

Princeton showed that she had great power and that with her stellar drop kicker, Tibbott, in the game the outcome would have been at least a tie and in all probability a victory for the Princeton eleven. The Tiger team pushed the ball within fifteen yards of the Harvard soal soon after the initial kickoff, and though Princeton was unable to put the ball over for a touchdown the team would have been able to try for a field goal had Tibbott played.

Because of his absence the Tigers were compelled to let the chance slip by.

the lead that the men from Cambridge had gained.

Taking everything into consideration, the followers of the Tiger eleven feel that the team was not enabled to show its true strength and that in their contest next Saturday against Yale they will be able to break the Ell victories, which they believe in many cases were obtained against a stronger eleven than the Buildog possessed.

Tibbott's Absence Costly.

Eddie has due cause for lamentation here, for while Brown gained thirty yards for the Tigers before he was logard from behind by Harte, this would not have been the case with moore, who is a sprinter of intercollegiate reputation. Brown had a clear field for a touchdown when he was overhauled by the Crimson end.

Too Much Beef in Yale Line.

Evidently the impression of the Yale cam gained by Larry Bankhart, the Colgate coach, a week ago yesterday was well founded. He declared that the Blue line was not a first class one and Several times Driggs would have gone for good gains if the interference had not been ragged in front of him. Of course Harvard had a big advantage on Princeton when it came to sizing up the plays, for with Driggs back on kick formation it was a good bet that the play was a punt or an end run, for Princeton did not show any strong plays through the line from this formation.
